

June 15, 2009

Endeavor kindergarten students show compassion

Cyndi Minear
Reader Submitted

Mrs. Williams' kindergarten class is busy finding ways to show compassion. With the help of their teacher, students have created a bulletin board that highlights acts of kindness that they have observed throughout the school. Whenever another student or adult does something that shows compassion or kindness, the kindergarteners tell Mrs. Williams who then creates a flower for their Compassion Garden.

Compassion is just one of nine virtues that are taught in Endeavor's moral focus program. Starting in September and taught throughout the school year students learn about wisdom, respect, gratitude, self control, perseverance, courage, encouragement, compassion, and integrity.
